LOVE'S ANSWER.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY CALEB DUNN.

I lent Janet a book one day;
'Twas in a blossom-sweetened May,
While we were listening to the birds.
My love was mute as bee that sips
Sweet juice from the rose's lips.

Hers he'd had yet been framed in words.

On the white margin of a leaf
I wrote this question, plain and brief:
Ere in her hand I placed the book:
"When next we meet beneath this tree,
Will you, Janet, vouchsafe to me:

A kiss and love's approving look?"

We parted on that sunny day,
And for a year the ocean lay
Between us. In a distant clime
I traveled, but I ne'er forgot
The book, and often wondered what
Would be the answer to my rhyme.

Oftimes I saw her in my dreams,
And rambled by familiar streams
With her, as 'twas our wont to do;
Then she would open wide the book,
And, with a kiss and loving look,
Give me such joy as none e'er knew.

And yet, alas! sometimes with me
In dreams she met beneath that tree,
While on her unimpassioned face,
And in her eyes, bright as the sky—
As deeply blue and lustrous—I
No look of love or hope could trace.

But seas, however deep or wide,
True hearts that love can not divide,
And though hope oft seemed fading out,
Her precious image in my breast
Was ever an abiding guest.

And faith was stronger far than doubt.

At last there came a fateful day,
In the next blossom-sweetened May,
When 'neath that old, familiar tree,
While cantatrices of the grove
Sang their unwritten songs of love,
We twain together chanced to be.

I held her hand with hope and fear—
Was joy or disappointment near?
Was I to quaff the cup of bliss?
She smiled, and opening wide the book,
Gave me a sweet, approving look,
And sealed her answer with a kiss.

"WHAT, HO! APOTHECARY!"

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY EDMUND LYONS.

I always detested drugs, and that is, I suppose, one reason why I am sitting comfortably to-night in the parlor behind the store, waiting for my clerk to relieve me, or for someone to come in with a prescription which I shall probably know how to fill. If not, I shall tell the messenger his medicine will be ready in half an hour, leave my boy in charge of the store, and step around to the doctor who wrote the jargon for an interpretation; or perhaps I shall suggest to him to accompany me to the drug-store, and there practically illustrate his meaning. An unusual proceeding, that, for a druggist, but surely a safe one. It might be well for the public if they were all situated as I am, and could do the same.

My brother's disposition was very dissimilar to mine. As a child, his love for nauseous drugs of all sorts, including rhubarb and Gregory's powders, was a cause of lasting and profound amazement to the simple people of the far-away New England village in which we lived. My mother said he took his matutinal tablespoonful of treacle and brimstone as if it were new milk, and on one occasion even asked for more; while I, she protested contemptuously, made a double dose of mine, taking it first olfactorily through my nose, "and then swallowing it with a face as wry as if it was medicine I was giving him." Which, with all the innocence of childhood, I really believed it was. I know better now.

Under these favoring conditions it is hardly to be wondered that my brother, who labored, I may as well admit at once, under the preposterous name of Pharaoh, became, in course of time a druggist, and opened an unpretentious store at the north end of the one straggling street of our village. He was always my mother's favorite son, and the marked reluctance of the parish clergyman to christen the boy by the extraordinary appellation chosen for him led her to say, openly in church, that if he would not baptize the baby there were others who would. She considered that he was abused at the very beginning of his life, and she was determined that no effort of hers should be spared to make his after years prosperous.

But prosperity was slow to come to him. In our village nobody ever seemed to be sick, unless it was a sickness unto death, called courteously by many names, all of which my brother knew, but recognized, in a general way, as old age. Of course, all of this might have been changed for the better if there had been a doctor in the place, but there was no medical practitioner there. A few very young men, with their diplomas still uncrumpled, had, indeed, surveyed the field, but they had all been frightened away by the fresh sea-breezes, the total absence of liquor-saloons, the appearance of the residents above ground, and the very high figures on the rough stones in the little churchyard that indicated the ages attained by the people who lay below.

So we had no doctor, and it was becoming painfully apparent that unless we procured one, my brother Pharaoh would, sooner or later, break the record of the village by starving to death. Our mother was a woman of infinite resource. Left a widow very soon after my birth, with an income barely sufficient for our wants, she had pinched and scraped, and mended and patched, and turned her own dresses and ours, and exercised her skill on the dresses of other people, until she had given both of her sons a fair education, and saved a little money besides, money which, as she candidly told us, she intended at her death to leave in the proportions of two-thirds to Pharaoh and one-third to me; and now that the child of her first affections was embarked in a business which the neighbors respected far too highly to patronize, and only needed a doctor to insure his success, was that doctor to be denied him? Not while she had a younger son still left. One-half of her savings was drawn from the bank, and I was sent away to study medicine and capture a diploma.

I learned enough of physics to pass my examination, and, I think, no more. I may say at once that I never had any practice to speak of, and at this day I should make a sorry doctor; but I went back with the right to place the letters M. D. after my name, and I did so immediately. The steel plate at the door of my humble lodgings would have told the story to anyone who, under happier circumstances, might have been in search of a physician. "Timothy Fairweather, M. D." I thought this looked better than "Pharaoh Fairweather, Pharmacist," which sounded, to my ears, at least, alliterative, and was the sign outside my brother's place of no business across the road. But the doctor was not one while more successful than the druggist, and for five years my profession only yielded me the meagre fees earned at the rather rare bald-headed entrances to life and the white-headed departures from it. Nobody ever broke an arm, or leg, or a collar bone, and if anyone had done so it would, perhaps, have been wiser to have left the bone unset that to have entrusted to my skill as an anatomist.

Our poor mother was my first real patient, and I failed to cure her. She was hopeful to the last, and would not listen to any suggestion relative to calling upon a physician of repute. "When my own son is a doctor," she said, "what do I want with a stranger?" Nobody remonstrated, for in those days we had no idea that the course of consumption could be stayed. So she swallowed harmless drugs from my brother's shop, and I prescribed hot flannels, early hours and peef-tea, and she slowly breathed my father, and the people of the village remarked that in all the long years between his death and hers nobody as young as either of them had been laid in the old churchyard.

The half of her savings, which she had reserved after seeing me launched on life as a doctor, still remained intact. We had struggled on, Heaven knows how, without touching it, and the house in which we lived, and which my plate adorned, was her own. She had left it, jointly, to her sons. So we battled against fate for another year, and I made some progress. It was not in the medical direction, however, but by falling in love with the rector's daughter, which, as nobody who had seen the girl could have denied, was a wise thing to do. I had only my diploma to offer her, and I was not sure that she cared a button for me. Sometimes I feared, with a sickening fear, that my brother Pharaoh was her favorite, and at others I disconsolately convinced myself that she had no affection for either of us, and occasionally I felt perfectly certain that her heart was all my own; so at last I determined to take advantage of the next addition of these certainties, and lay my love and my diploma, with all its bright possibilities, at the feet of the castor-oil. I soon became popular with the children—a sure road to the confidence of the mothers. I had no doubt that my brother's failures were due to the horribly bitter, and greasy, and sickly-sweet doses which, recollecting how, as a child, he loved such things himself, he used to make up. The little ones never cried for his mixtures; they did for mine, and I was getting quite prosperous when he came back.

He had been very busy. He had sold the drug-store, throwing in my practice, he said, as "a make-weight." The purchaser was a doctor and druggist combined, and I heard, long afterward, that he had been fairly successful, and ultimately united the business of undertaker to the other two. The negotiations with the German doctor and his brother had been satisfactorily concluded; and, as there was nothing to detain us longer in the village where we were born, we were soon upon the road.

It was a long journey, and the last part of it was made by water. We were standing together on the deck of the steamer one afternoon, our destination but a few miles away, when Pharaoh said: "Timothy, where is your diploma?" "Oh, in my trunk, I suppose," I replied carelessly. I seldom looked at the useless document. Patients do not, as a rule, ask to be shown the diplomas of their physicians—and if they did, mine would not have been often called for.

"No; Timothy," said Pharaoh calmly; "it is not in your trunk. It is here." And he pulled it out of his pocket and showed it to me.

"And now," he continued, "I may as well unfold to you the second part of my scheme, and unless you agree to it as freely as you did to the first, it would have been better for us to have patiently starved to death where we were than to have come here. I have been practicing medicine with your diploma for two months, and, under the old doctor's wing, I have been very successful. I have secured all his patients, and obtained some new ones. My future is assured, and so will yours be if you take my advice. As a druggist (for reasons which you seem to have forgotten), I failed. As a doctor I have succeeded. As a doctor you never had an hour's success, because, you simple fellow, instead of trying to make people believe that they were ill you told them that there was nothing at all the matter with them; but as a druggist the last three months satisfied me that you will shine more brightly than the lights in your own windows. Will you take my license and give me your diploma? Shall I enter the village (we are close to it now) as Timothy Fairweather, M. D., and as Pharaoh Fairweather, Pharmacist? It will en-

I was horribly shocked at first, but his last argument carried the day, and I finally agreed to his proposition, which really seemed to have much show of reason about it. Mary, too, consented, after many vehement protests, and nobody else has ever objected. Twenty years have passed since we changed names and licenses, and we have been very prosperous. With my wife and children around me in our pretty little house, some distance from the drug-store, I do not envy even the village doctor.

The night-clerk has not yet come, but I hear a hearty voice on the street. To a chorus of laughter from half a dozen wide-mouthed yokels (or my brother is a great favorite) it hails me with the words that head this history. I know it well, and I have no occasion to respond with the counter quotation:

"Who calls so loud?"

VIOLET CAMERON.

Violet Cameron's introduction to Americans has not been made under entirely auspicious circumstances, so far as her domestic affairs are concerned. The daily press has been filled with the details of her marital woes, and for the nonce it seems to have been forgotten that she comes to us as an actress, and, as such, has had a career worth recording. It shall be THE CLIPPER's duty to make known this more respectable side of the story. Violet Cameron is the niece of Lydia Thompson, and was born about 1861. She is yet young, and she is of prepossessing appearance. Her first recorded appearance on the stage was in London, Eng., during April, 1870, when she assumed the character of Karl in "Faust." She played as a child in various pantomimes at the Drury-lane and Adelphi Theatres, London, from 1871 to 1874, and in the following year went to the London Globe. At the Criterion Theatre, London, Jan. 31, 1876, she created the role of Joconde in Farine's burlesque "Piff, Paff." In September, 1876, she acted Perdita in "A Winter's Tale" at the Alexandra Theatre, Liverpool. Returning to London, she was engaged at the Folly Theatre, where, from the Fall of 1876 to 1878, she played in a number of burlesques and comic operas, some of her roles being as follow: Nov. 11, 1876, Polly Hopkins, in "Robinson Crusoe," Farine's burlesque; Sept. 15, 1877, Pearlina, in an English version of Leococq's "Sea Nymphs"; Sept. 15, 1877, Antoinette, in "The Creole," Reece and Farine's version of Offenbach's burlesque "La Creole;" Feb. 23, 1878, Germaine in Farne and Reece's version of "Les Cloches de Corneville" ("Chimes of Normandy"). In creating the last named character for English playgoers Miss Cameron achieved a signal success. John Howson, Shiel Barry and Kate Monroe were in the cast with her at this time. Oct. 7, 1878, Miss Cameron went to the Strand Theatre, London, acting first in Farne's burlesque "Nemesis." When Farne's English version of "Madame Favart" was first produced at the Strand, April 12, 1879, Miss Cameron created the role of Suzanne, and on Sept. 18, 1880, she was the original Countess in the English version of "Olivette." This opera ran over three hundred nights, and Miss Cameron made a hit quite as pronounced as her preceding one in "Madame Favart." When Alexander Henderson opened his new Comedy Theatre in London, in the Haymarket, Oct. 15, 1881, with the first performance in London of "The Mascot," Miss Cameron sang the title-role with success. At the same theatre, April 22, 1882, she sang in "Boccaccio," appearing in the title-role. When the English version of "Falka" was produced at the Comedy, Oct. 29, 1883, Miss Cameron created the title-role. Afterwards she sang at the Comedy in various light operas. Her first benefit occurred there June 25, 1884. On April 29, 1886, at the Avenue Theatre, she created the lead in "Bad Boys," a comedy from the French of Clara Solo! Dec. 19, 1885, she played Dudley in Reece and Farne's fairy burlesque "Kenilworth," then acted for the first time; and on April 24, 1886, at the same theatre, she created the title role in Farne's burlesque "Larline." The portrait we present is from a photograph taken several years ago. It is but a short time since we reproduced a later photograph of her. Miss Cameron's full Christian name is Violet Lydia. About two years ago she married David De Bensaude, and she has one child by him.

GOOD COLLATERAL.

The other morning, as the janitor of a bank opened the door of said institution, he was surprised to observe three rather tired-looking citizens seated on the steps, the centre one of whom held a sealed envelope carefully in sight of his two companions. They had evidently been waiting a considerable time:

"Want to make a deposit, gentlemen?" asked the cashier, who shortly arrived. "Step inside."

"No, I want to negotiate a loan," said the man with the envelope excitedly, "and there ain't a minute to lose. I want five thousand dollars quicker'n Hades can score a feather."

"What collaterals have you—Governments?" inquired the bank official.

"Governing nothing. I've got something that bears four per cent all hollow. You see, I've been sitting in a poker game across the street, and there's over four thousand dollars in the pot. There are three or four pretty strong hands out, and the boys have given me thirty minutes to raise a stake on my hand. It's in this envelope. Just look at it, but don't give it away to these gentlemen. They're in the game, and come along to see I don't monkey with the cards."

"But, my dear sir," said the cashier, who had quietly opened the envelope and found it to contain four kings and an ace, "this is entirely irregular—we don't lend money on cards."

"But you all right to me raised out on a hand like this?" repeated the pokerist. "These fellas think I'm bluffing, and I just can clean out the whole gang. You see we ain't playing straight-flushes, so I've got 'em right in the door!"

"Can't help it, sir. Never heard of such a thing," said the cashier; and the disappointed applicant and friends drifted sadly out. On the corner they met the bank's president, who was himself just from a quiet, little all-night game at the Union. They explained the case again, and the next moment the superior officer darted into the bank, seized a bag of twenties, and followed the trio. In about ten minutes he returned with the bag and an extra handful of twenties, which he flung on the counter.

"Here, credit five hundred to interest account."

he said to the cashier. "Why, I thought you had more business snap, sir. Ever play poker?" "No, sir."

"Ah! thought not—thought not. If you did you'd know what good collateral was. Remember, in the future, that four kings and an ace straight flushed barred, are always good in this institution for our entire assets, sir; our entire assets!"

Reports of performances on Monday nights in the following places reach us by mail: Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Baltimore, Albany, Troy, Providence and Newark.

Jeffreys Lewis Unwived in San Francisco—"A Tin Soldier," "The Octocean," "A Trip to Africa" and Billy Emerson's Minstrels the Leading Attractions.

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.—"A Tin Soldier," which had done large business during its initial week, began its second one last night, the attendance being notably good. The "S. R." legend has frequently been seen here during this engagement.

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.—"A Trip to Africa" was put on last night by the Duff Opera Co. Fine scenery and costumes were displayed, and a large audience was attracted. [We fear our correspondent has inadvertently wired the wrong theatre, as Duff's Co. had previously been singing at the Baldwin, which house is not mentioned in our correspondent's telegram this week, whereas the California has been closed for some weeks. Still it is possible that there has been a transfer.—ED. CLIPPER.]

ALCAZAR THEATRE.—Jeffreys Lewis appeared last night in "The Octocean." The house was well filled. In spite of the fact that the lady seems to have grown careless or indifferent of late, she has undeniably made a hit during her engagement here. E. J. Buckley having withdrawn, Harry Mainhall is now conspicuous in her support.

STANDARD THEATRE.—Billy Emerson's Minstrels presented a new bill last night. It was well received.

BRIEFS.—Blanche De Voelet, Charles Harding and the Girards are the latest engagements at the Fountain. William Kohler last night made his first appearance at Walter Moroso's Amphitheatre in "Louis XI.".... The Grand Opera-house will be opened the latter part of the present month with Jaguarine in "Mazeppa.".... Sylvano and Arthur are booked at the Vienna Gardens. Charley Hall's plans have undergone a change since my dispatch of last week. He remains here for the present. Jeffreys Lewis has been granted a divorce from Maitland. .... "Kenneth Gordon," by Osmond Teare's Co., will be done Oct. 11, at the Baldwin Theatre, for the first time in America.

Boston Goes Dixey-mad, Thanks to E. E. Rice's Skill as Boomer—"Ermine" Scores a Hit—Other Openings.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 5.

Boston has gone Dixey-mad. The Hollis-street Theatre was last night jammed to overflowing with a ultra-swallow-full-dress audience, and the star was accorded the wildest sort of a reception as the curtain parted, disclosing Adonis on his pedestal. Every fifteen minutes flowers were passed through the aisles and handed over the footlights to Mr. Dixey and the pretty girls in the cast. E. E. Rice made a speech at the end of the first act, and Mr. Dixey was forced to address the audience at the end of the piece. Baldwin's Cadet Band serenaded Dixey at the Adams House after the performance, and the hor of the hour presented himself on the balcony to a cheering multitude on the street beneath. In truth, it was a gorgeously arranged Dixey boom, and Mr. Rice has "worked" the Boston opening admirably. Seats sold at a premium of $2. .... "Ermine" drew a splendid and fashionable audience at the Globe, making a great success. Francis B. Wilson and Pauline Hall scored particularly distinct hits. The scenery and effects were grand and all new. .... There was a good house at the Boston, "Shadows of a Great City" duplicating its last season's success. .... The Howard accommodated a huge gathering, and the Athenaeum Specialty Co. never appeared to better advantage. Every act was excellent. Manager Harris performed the vanishing-lady trick, owing to the non-arrival of a professor from York. .... Helen Drury's second week opened big at the Park. .... Yesterday's weather was beautiful and balmy, and brought carloads of people to the principal theatres last night. .... Helene Adell's Co. had a small house yesterday afternoon at the Bijou Theatre, when they opened a week with "Moths." In the evening the audience was of vastly increased proportions. Outside the star herself, I cannot truthfully say anything in commendation of the company. The Adell Co.'s version of "Moths" differs materially from the Wallackian rendition, in that there is a great deal of the comedy element infused into the dialogue. Miss Adell was very uneven in her impersonation. At times she was surprisingly good and forcible, and again she sank below the level of mediocrity. .... Austin & Stone's was well crowded with the curiously inclined. .... Keith & Batcheller's and the World's Museums were right in the business whirl, too. .... Frederick Weld, the theatrical mechanic, died suddenly of heart-disease Saturday morning at his home in this city. He was born here about 1823, and went to our public schools. Later he learned the carpenter's trade. He entered the employ of the Boston Museum, with which he was connected eleven years. In 1834 he became a stage-carpenter in the Boston Theatre, where he remained several years. Some twenty years ago he went into business for himself, and located on Tremont street. He employed a large force of carpenters and painters, and made a specialty of furnishing stages, scenery and stage accessories for entertainments and private theatricals. His work is known all over New England. He was a member of the Boston Theatrical Mechanics' Association. He leaves a wife. .... Alt. Miaco hadn't "The Magic Talisman" ready, so his company opened at the Windsor in "Humpty Dumpty." "The Talisman" will be done to-night, I hear.

Manager Bingham's New Arrival.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 5.

There is a new attraction at the Westminster Music. Manager J. W. Bingham's wife presented him with a nine-pound boy Saturday.

Fred Warde and Edmund Collier Splitting Honors—A Gymnast Falls and Breaks a Shoulder-blade.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Oct. 5.

The Bijou Theatre was packed from pit to dome last night to welcome Frederick Warde in "Virginius." The crowd exceeded in size that of the opening night. His support was better than has been seen here before, and the mounting was likewise. .... Edmund Collier made his bow as a star here at the Opera-house in the presence of an audience of goodly proportions. "Metamora" was the play. The young star's interpretation of the title-role was in keeping with the good reports we have had of him from your city, and received instant recognition at the hands of the house. With the exceptions of Clara Lipman and Sara Neville, the support was rather mediocre. .... The Academy came to the front with its stereotyped large house, and the show was fully up to the standard. .... Our Boarding-house could not accommodate all the people that wanted to get into Harris' Museum, but those that got there enjoyed the fun. .... Forepaugh's big tent had every seat filled afternoon and evening. Burton Pritchard, one of the Fisher Brothers, met with a painful accident last night. In making his flying leap from the trapeze, he failed to get a firm hold of his brother's hands. The latter held him by two fingers only, as they swung back and forth, and, in attempting to drop him into the net, let him fall about two feet wide of the mark, and onto the ground, breaking his shoulder-blade and inflicting some severe bruises. He is being cared for at the Homopathic Hospital.

Narrow Escape of a Theatre.

TOPEKA, Kas., Oct. 3.

Last night, at the Grand Opera-house, there was a fire-call. It was about a half hour after Milton Nobles' Co. had concluded their performance of "The Phoenix." A fire had broken out in the livery stable separated from the theatre by only a twelve-foot alley. The stable was entirely consumed. The firemen worked hard to prevent the theatre from catching, and, after all was over, Manager Kendall gave the fire-laddies a supper at Dwight's. The only damage to the Opera-house was caused by water on its carpets.

[This telegram was intended to be in time for our last issue, but could not reach us until a day too late. ## MINNESOTA.

Minneapolis.—The Grand Opera-house is held by Emma Abbott all this week, it being her first visit in two years. The following operas are to be sung: "Lucrezia Borgia," "Paul and Virginia" Oct. 5 and 9; "Crispino," "Mikado," "Faust" and "Linda of Chamouni" and "Bohemian Girl" at the matinees. Kiralfy's "Black Crook" follows 11 to 16. Edwin Booth had the biggest three nights' engagement, Sept. 29, 30 and Oct. 1, ever played here. Prices were advanced 150 per cent., and still the house was filled every night, and on the when he played "Hamlet," it was crowded to the very door. The meeting again of the very civil and urbanic singer, S. Chase, was by no means the least pleasure of the week. Address to your correspondent: Polk's "Mixed Pickles" Co. drew shouts of laughter from paying audiences 2-4.

PENNSYLVANIA.—"The Long Strike" is the bill this week. There was a little dropping off in attendance last week, owing to the fact, probably, that one play was put on—"Not Guilty." Doubtless a change in the bill about the middle of the week would have caused an increase in the number of hearers.

THE CASINO.—The Mexican Band, whose season at the Exposition closed with that great show 4. The band will remain two weeks longer, until the 18th, at the Casino, and will undoubtedly do a fine business.

THEATRE COMIQUE.—The De Forrest & Carroll Burlesque Co. open 6 for the week, business is good. SACKEIT & WIGGINS' DIME MUSEUM.—For this week, "The Belles of the Barber Shop," with John H. W. Byrnes in the leading-role. The Hill & Haworth Comedy Co. on the upper stage, and in the curio-hall wax figures of the Chicago anarchists, Wilson, the expansionist—who broke his arm in Milwaukee recently, and makes his first appearance, since the accident, this week—and Barney Nelson. Business is fair.

NOTES.—Manager J. R. Conklin of the Grand is in New York....A man named Hallie threatens to build another first class theatre, which with the one Sackett & Wiggin's building, will make three theatres in the city. Manager Conklin is reported to have said that he is such a man to live, but three cannot....Joe Murch, whom all actors know, has returned from a trip to Boston and the interior of Maine....The Gounod Club commenced its regular rehearsals Sept. 28, and will sing "The Messiah" at the first concert of its third season, about Christmas time....Prof. Proctor gave a delightful musical 27, at which a Mr. Burroughs of Chicago, a tenor, sang without giving general satisfaction, due, doubtless, to a cold....The Exposition closed 4, after a thoroughly satisfactory season of six weeks. The attendance, instead of diminishing as the end approached, constantly increased, and the receipts will be found probably to exceed $75,000....At the building was put up by subscription, paid in by the people, and will probably be a dividend for the public-spirited man who started the affair more as an advertisement for the city than as an investment. C. M. Palmer, proprietor and editor of The Northwestern Miller, has been elected manager for the coming year, and will make a good one....Dr. A. A. Ames, Exalted ruler of Minneapolis Lodge, No. 44, B. P. O. E., and at present Mayor of Minneapolis, has been nominated for Governor of Minnesota by the Democrats, with good prospects of an election.

St. Paul.—At the Grand Opera-house, Kiralfy's "Black Crook" come Oct. 4, for the week. J. F. Polk's "Mixed Pickles" Co. open 10 for the audience, Sept. 27, 28 and 29. Edwin Booth opened an engagement 30, in "Richelieu," to a full attendance, though doubling the prices had the effect of preventing the house from being packed. His repertoire here also includes "Fool's Revenge" Oct. 1, "Othello," 2 and "Hamlet" matinees 2.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.—For week of 4 is billed the Stewart All-star Specialty Co., composed of Dick and Hattie Stewart, Alice Evans, Hickey and Davies, Agda Weston, Thos. Galvin, Minnie Lamont, De Piero Bros., and Wells and Sylvano. The Olympic had its share of business last week, the house being comfortably filled.

SACKEIT & WIGGINS' MUSEUM.—For week of 4; Eli Boorer, Prof. Roger, Hill Children, Geo. Austin and the Four Tourists, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," with Chas. Howard as Uncle Tom, on the stage. Business last week was good. No place of amusement in the city gives so much entertainment for the money.

RANDONNS.—The ice-palace carnival directors have decided that the ice-palace the coming season shall occupy the same site as last season, namely, Central Park. President Geo. R. Finch tendered his resignation, and L. H. Maxfield was chosen in his place. Other changes were made in officers, leaving the present management: L. H. Maxfield, president; Dennis Ryan, vice-president; Col. A. Allen, second vice-president; Geo. Thompson, secretary, and W. H. Van Slyke, general-manager.

NEW MEXICO.

Santa Fe.—Theatrical business has been very quiet here lately, simply for the reason that we had no good accommodations, but now all is changed. We now have two very good opera-houses—Motley's Opera-house, under the able management of A. M. Dettlebach, and Catron's Hall, managed by Norfleet & Burton. The latter has been thoroughly renovated, and may now be said to be in excellent condition, though some time has been used. The managers, the motley's, the managers don't seem to "catch on" at least it looks that way, for Manager Dettlebach of Motley's has done all the business so far this Fall. He had the Chicago Opera Co., under the management of D. E. Skiff, Sept. 29 and 30, in "Mikado" and "Sorcerer." He also has other wires that he is pulling, in the way of future attractions. A "home talent" colored-minstrel show was given 24 at Motley's, and was a highly creditable affair. They had a good house, and was a highly creditable affair.

Abuquerque.—At Grant's Opera-house Street-Speakers Dramatic Co. Sept. 28, 29, 30, to moderate business. Booked: Chicago Opera Co. Oct. 1, 2.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Washington.—At Albaugh's, "Prince Karl" had a successful engagement. The play took well, and Mr. Macfield in the title-role. His imitations and piano-performance were very clever. There was quite an interest centered in Emma Sheridan, a young lady of this city. This week we have Cecilia Alberg and Lewis Morrison, in "Faust and Marguerite," "Clito" Oct. 11-16.

NATIONAL THEATRE.—Frank Mayo finished an altogether good week's business. "Nordreck" was the bill up to Friday, giving place to "The Three Guardsmen." The opening night the house was small, but was on the increase each succeeding night. This week Thatcher, Primrose & West's Minstrels. Next week.

Hazzard's BLOW.—Chas. Stedman's Co., in "Our Boarding-house," attracted good audiences last week. "The Shaughraun" is the attraction this week, under the management of H. J. Sargent. Winnet's "Passion Slave" comes next.

DIME MUSEUM.—This house is the "Mascot" place of amusement in the city. No matter what the attraction is, the house is always filled. Madame Neumann and her son Augustus showed to big business, last week. This week Gus Hill's Novelty Co.

KERNAN'S WASHINGTON THEATRE.—The European Co. did not make out so well as the previous company, though it had good houses. This week, Neumann & Kelly's Challenge Comedy and Specialty Co. The company is composed as follows: The Derville Family, Sam. Devere, the Foys (Lizzie and Dave), Mitchell and Loraine, Hogan Brothers, Alice Gleason, P. H. Thurber, and Needham and Kelly.

Notes.—John A. Ellinger, for many years connected with Ford's Opera house, is now manager of Kernan's Washington Theatre. Walter H. Tawney was seriously ill at his home in this city, and was forced to throw up a good engagement for this season....Wilton A. Luckey left Washington Sept. 26 to join Fanny Day's export's Co....H. Kerman, the manager of the Kerman's Washington Theatre, is a good business man, and has already gained considerable popularity.

KENTUCKY.

Louisville.—At Macauley's this week Dan Sully in "Daddy Nolan." The Thompson Opera Co. produced the following over the first three nights: "The Musketeer," "The Golden Goose" and "Robert Macauley." They succeeded in drawing only moderate audiences. The last three nights Harold Forsberg played "Robert Macauley" to only fair business.

MASONIC TEMPLE.—Due Oct. 4, 5, 6. "The Devil's Auction." The balance of the week the house will be dark. Lillian Lewis opened Sept. 27 to a "S. R. O." house, in "The Creole," which was continued the first three nights. The last three nights "Odette" was produced to very good houses.

HARRIS' MUSEUM.—Week of 4, N. S. Wood in "The Boy Detective." Hicks & Sawyer's Minstrels last week played remarkably good business.

GRAND CENTRAL.—Week of 4 and 9: Fanny Bernards, Mrs. Mortons, Eliza Goodrich, Little Harris, Johnson and Mack Brown Rosenberg and Dewitt, Gibson and Davis, Frank Foster and Maggie Thorne. Business is fair.

NOTES.—The Elks give a social session at Macauley's Sunday afternoon, Oct. 3.....O. H. Cole, John Ruth, Fredrick C. T. and others in their music-hall.

THEATRE COMIQUE.—The De Forrest & Carroll Burlesque Co. open 6 for the week, business is good.

SACKEIT & WIGGINS' DIME MUSEUM.—For this week, "The Belles of the Barber Shop," with John H. W. Byrnes in the leading-role.

THE HILL & HAWORTH.—The Hill & Haworth Comedy Co. on the upper stage, and in the curio-hall wax figures of the Chicago anarchists, Wilson, the expansionist—who broke his arm in Milwaukee recently, and makes his first appearance, since the accident, this week—and Barney Nelson. ## PENNSYLVANIA.

Philadelphia.—Although every theatre in town was open night of Oct. 2, and there are many more here than in any other city on this continent, save New York, the interest of the amusement-loving public was centred in the reopening of the beautiful Temple Theatre for its second season, and in the production of its first opera, "The Mystic Isle." The work, in two acts, is by the well-known librettist Sidney Rosenfeld, accompanied by John B. Grant, and was witnessed by an audience which filled every chair that could be sandwiched in the aisles, and stood five or six deep on the sides of the house. The beauty of the broad vestibule was forgotten, almost, when the curtain rose on the novel and very handsome set of the first act, one of the most attractive ever seen here. The liberality and earnest desire to please which Manager Brotherton and Proprietor Singerly have uniformly shown had evidently been ably seconded and carried out by Stage-manager Daly—one of the cleverest men in his line in this country. As the heavy folds of velvet rolled up, a vine-clad and flowery bower blazed in the right foreground over a bay on the shores of the Mystic Isle, which stretched away to the left in pastoral perspective, with a schooner lying at anchor, from which a young lady's boating expedition had just landed under the care of Miss Amanda Webb (Genie Holtzmeier). The young ladies are preceded on the stage, however, by a group of Impressionist artists, who have also dis-covered the island and are proceeding ruthlessly to sketch it. It is on them that the eye first falls. Reginald (Chas. J. Campbell), the tenor lover, one of their number, having wandered away to brood over his lost love, Alice (Mrs. Riegel), who presently comes and meets him, she and her father, Chickelock (Charles H. Stanley), having also discovered the island in their search for solitude. There are other dramatis personae who have discovered the island—Giles Clumps (Henry C. Peakes) and his son Davy (Louis Harrison); indeed had not these two made the first discovery and stuck to it, the subsequent developments would not have had such stupider time, as would also the audience. After Alice and Reginald meet, Chickelock discovers that the very man to escape whom he fled society, is at present in his solitude, so he commits Alice to the care of Clump, who is to keep Reginald away from her. Clump can't do it, of course, and the lovers are finally paired by parental permission, not, however, until an amusing subplot has been worked out by Clump and Davy, whose advertisement for "Summer boarders" has been so abundantly rewarded; Miss Webb, who loses her diary, which Chickelock finds, and so discovers that she is the long-lost love of his youth; and Chickelock himself, who gets possession of an iron box that Davy has found, and discovers towards the end that it contains a will making Reginald heir to all the island, and, consequently, a very eligible husband. The male parts are all well played, Mrs. Harrison and Peakes, seconded by Mr. Stanley, carry off, perhaps, the honors of the evening. Mr. Harrison, in particular, got a lion's share of the applause, and all three proved themselves old favorites. As Reginald, Mr. Campbell sang finely, and looked as love-sick as any tenor could be expected to do. Mr. Arthur as Waldo and James W. Myers, the new baritone, as Alphonse, their subordinate parts well. For the female part of the cast, Marie Glover as Rose and Genie Holtzmeier as Miss Webb, the latter pretty well known here, sang and acted with grace and spirit. The two debutantes, Mrs. Riegel and Dolly Kerner, were, of course, the most conspicuous figures. Neither had ever appeared before in public as a professional, but they would, perhaps, be unfair for judgment of either's professional capability from her first night. Mrs. Riegel enters the stage under surroundings well calculated to make her a drawing card here. Her husband, with whom she is not living, is a son of the senior member of the late firm of Riegel, Scott & Co., once the most prominent wholesale drygoods house in Philadelphia. Mrs. Riegel was, before her marriage, well known in the most fashionable circles of Philadelphia society. After her marriage and until a year or two past she retained these associations. She is a rather striking-looking woman, who was evidently made up on her debut to look like Mrs. Langtry, and she certainly succeeded to a considerable extent. It was to see Mrs. Riegel that many of those who had never crossed its broad portals before came to the Temple night of 2. She was remembered in society as a woman of great nerve and determination, the most daring horsewoman, probably, in town, and the heroine of feats which her tamer sisters in the gay world would not have dared. The Mrs. Riegel they saw on the stage was tall, with broad sloping shoulders, slender waist and tourneur than Mrs. Langtry, and an "understanding" quite as extensive, if not more so, than that of the English beauty. Her blonde tresses were set off by black brows and dark eyes, and a fair complexion. Her voice was sweet, self-contained and fairly sympathetic, though limited in range. Her acting, while thoroughly self-possessed, was a weak point. But she received nearly a score of handsomely dressed in the waltz-suit of the "Mikado." Her dancing was very sweetly and effectively. Miss Kerner is the daughter of U. S. Marshal Kerner, and has chosen Dorothy Dean as her stage name. She was extremely nervous, and overacted her part. But her faults can be easily remedied. An interesting feature of the first performance was Mr. Rosenfeld's speech at the end of the first act. He came before the curtain and "returned" thanks in a pleasant way to the audience. He was then applauded. But he continued to speak, and mistook the noise incidental to the shifting of a scene for a groan from the gallery. This irritated him, and when he showed it, the audience laughed. Then he got angry and said he wouldn't leave the stage for a "few minutes." The audience, at first thought better of it, and left. Mrs. Langtry's was a success last week, both as to the presentation and the financial results, the audience being large and enthusiastic. Mattie Vicker's will do "Cherub" week beginning 11.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The attendance was good at this house, with a few exceptions, in fact, the house was not fully booked. The manager, Mr. Brotherton, has telephoned to Jessie Bartlett Davis, offering her the role of Miss Webb, now filled by Miss Holtzmeier (Mrs. Rosenfeld), and that infectious music and taking airs to be interpolated into the score.

ARCH-STREET THEATRE.—Alfred's appearance 4 in "Arch Street" was a notable event in the history of the season at this house. Helen Dauphin makes her Philadelphia dramatic debut 11 at this house.

MCCALLU'S OPERA-HOUSE.—Prof. Hermann opened his Philadelphia season and this house in a preliminary season of Sept. 28, and has played since to large and interested audiences. Col. McCaul will open his own season 11, with "Josephine Sold By Her Sisters," its first presentation here.

NATIONAL.—Business at the National is a pretty good test of Philadelphia's disposition to theatre-going. It has sized up this season already twenty per cent greater than that of last year. "Eagle's Nest" actually turned away people, and "Alvin Joakin" was put on night of Oct. 1, with every indication of doing as much. Due 11, Sadie Hasson in "Never Say Die."

WALNUT.—The Kiralfys' "Around the World in Eighty Days" was put on with splendid scenic effects 4, and with a revised edition of "The Mikado" followed which was so popular here last season in "Black Crook." "Ivy" 18.

CHESTNUT-STREET OPERA-HOUSE.—Januschek opened last week to very poor houses on account of the heat. She soon drew better, and played on the whole a powerful and satisfactory engagement. J. K. Emmet opened 4. Due 11, Lawrence Barrett.

CHESTNUT-STREET THEATRE.—"Nanon," the popular, and Carlton, the more popular, were seen 4 for the first time this season, with two new Nanons. Ray Samuels and Fannie Rice, the old favorites in the other roles, and some brand-new scenery from H. E. Hoyt's brush.

FOREPAUGH'S.—Instead of Bertha Welby in "Called Back," "Storm-beaten" was put on by a good company, with the Kroff Family in the Museum. Manager Connally canceled the Welby Co., after seeing them play in your city.

WINDSOR.—What used to be Clark's Club Theatre, and then became the People's under Fox, is now the Windsor, and is run by John F. Betz, the wealthy brewer. "Olivette," by the company which played all Summer at the Arch-street Opera-house, is now running.

CENTRAL.—Reilly & Wood's Co. opened 4. Night of 5, some of Manager Gilmore's own imported European novelties will be seen. The new drop-curtain painted by James Thomas, representing Queen Isabella receiving Columbus on his return from America, is to rise this week. It is a common thing to turn people away from this house, which has a reputation of its own that is difficult to the combinations playing it.

JOTTINGS.—Sidney Drew will soon create a character in "Odd, to Say the Least of It" at the Central.

Managers.—W. J. Gilmore and Harry Miner took a jolly trip Sept. 30 on G. S. Green's yacht. Mr. Miner was off to negotiate for the yacht.... John R. ## THE SCULLING CHAMPIONSHIP.

Beach's Victory Over Gaudaur.

We reproduce from The London Sportsman the appended detailed account of the great race between W. Beach and J. A. Gaudaur for the championship of the world, rowed on the Thames Sept. 18. It will be seen that the time cabled as that of the full distance, 18m. 56s., was incorrect, it having taken 18m. 58s. to row to Barnes' Bridge, and the time of the race being eleven seconds slower than that credited to Brightwell, who had both a fast tide and a strong wind in his favor. There is no doubt, however, that all things considered, the performance of Beach was the more meritorious:

The weather was of a most charming description and an enormous number of spectators assembled, the banks and every point of vantage along the course being eagerly seized upon. At the hour originally fixed for the start there was a capital flood, and had they got away at the half-hour there is but little doubt that we should have had to record something sensational in the way of time, but it was the tide which delayed the start, to be delayed weak, and there was a decided difference in this respect to the day when Lee and Matheron rowed. The Valencias assumed the lead at once, but the Actives, who, after a sharp struggle, passed the Columbias hunted them closely, being less than a length behind at half distance, which within a third of a mile of home they had improved upon to the extent of almost getting level, but they were unable to extend their lead, and dropped back behind. The Mayor Russell, himself an amateur oarsman, was starter, and the dutiful of referee were discharged by Chris. Thomas. The failure of the New York Athletic Club crew to start was a surprise and a disappointment, as the race was postponed one week in order to accommodate them.

POTOMAC RIVER REGATTA.
The annual regatta on the Potomac River open to all amateurs, was held Sept. 28. The distance rowed in all the events was a mile and a half, straightaway, and the water was somewhat lumpy. Result:
Four-oared gig—Columbia R. C. Washington, Sloan (bow), Wade Kondrup, Nute (stroke), Gibson (coxswain), first, in 9m. 29 $\frac{1}{2}$ s.; Iona R. C. Philadelphia, Davis (bow), Armstrong, H. H. Hinckley, Pease (stroke), first, in 9m. 37s.; Columbia R. C. Elizabeth, J. J. Shaw (bow), Clark Wilson, White (stroke), second, in 9m. 39 $\frac{1}{2}$ s. The Potomac led from end to end.

The latter crew were the favorites, and led for a mile when the Potomac spurted past them, followed by the Columbia.*

*Eight-oared skiff—Potomac B. C. Wardens (bow), Elmore, Robinson, Arnold, Dyer, Fife, Fitter, Kerrigan, Nute (stroke), first, in 9m. 36 $\frac{1}{2}$ s.; Columbia R. C. SACHEM DEFEATS MIRANDA.
G. H. Hill's English-built schooner Sacheam raced for a cup off Newport, R. I., Oct. 1. The course was twenty miles to windward from Brenton's Red lightship and return. At the start the wind came from southwest and at the finish it was blowing from northwest, the rate throughout the race being about eighteen miles an hour. The starting signal was given at 10.53, the Sacheam crossing the line 1m. 34s. after her opponent, but at 11.18 she crossed the bow of the Miranda an eighth of a mile in the lead. She continued to gain, turning the outer mark at 2.18, just seven minutes ahead, the elapsed time for the half-distance being, respectively, 3h. 21m. 57s. and 3h. 30m. 26s. The return journey was similar to the outward trip, and the Sacheam again gained so much as the first half. Result, corrected time, the Sacheam allowing her opponent 1m. 35s.; Sacheam, 4h. 57m. 11s.; Miranda, 5h. 6m. 26s.

QUICK PASSAGE.—The steamer Alameda, which arrived at San Francisco Oct. 1 from Sydney, via Auckland and Hobart, made the fastest trip on record between Sydney and San Francisco, taking 23 days, 6 hours, 30 minutes, which beats the previous record, made by the Marso, by six hours. The Alameda was detained at Auckland for six hours on Sept. 14 to allow merchants to answer their mail, which had just arrived by steamer thirty-seven days from London. This mail was sent East Oct. 2. It will leave New York for Liverpool on Saturday next, and is expected to arrive at the latter place Oct. 16. This will make the time of the trip from Auckland to England via the United States five days less than from England to Auckland by direct steamer. It will also reduce the time of the trip around the world to sixty-nine days.

THESS BEATS STRANGER.—The postponed second race between the sloop Thess and the cutter Stranger, for $200 a side, was sailed of Marblehead, Mass., Oct. 1. The course was fifteen miles to leeward the beach, first two and three-quarters seconds. After turning the beach, the Thess went to northwest and increased to the dimensions of half a gale, and in the heat to windward the Thess more than held her own, although outpointed by the English boat. Corrected time at finish: Thess, 5h. 17m. 45s.; Stranger, 5h. 30m. 7s. They sailed the first race of a new series, for $200 a side, the same distance, Oct. 2. The wind was light and puffy and the result the same before, the corrected time being: Thess, 4h. 44m. 10s.; Stranger, 4h. 50m. 33s.

THE FANCHON WINS.—Three boats started in the sweepstakes race on Lake Erie, for the championship of the lakes, at Toledo, O., Sept. 30. They were the Sylvia, Michigan Y. C., Alice Enright, Toledo Y. C., and Fanchon, Ohio Y. C. The Fanchon was the first to cross the line, followed two minutes later by the Enright, and eight minutes later the Sylvia crossed. All started with the wind with double reefed mainsails and jibs. The course was fifteen miles to leeward the beach, with a time limit of twelve hours. The Enright and Fanchon turned the course to the above club and a team picked from the State Island, Bergen Point and other clubs in this vicinity. Handicap races at 75yds., 300yds. and 600yds., open to all amateurs, will also take place, and it is expected that L. E. Myers will give an exhibition of his springing powers.

THE BIDDLE CUP.—The Biddle Cup was first swum for by students at the University of Pennsylvania at Flat Rock Dam, Schuykill River, Sept. 30. The distance was half a mile, straightaway, above the dam. Fourteen competed, and J. W. Geary, '89, won, in 21m. E. J. Sellers, '89, second.

WILLIAM RICHARDS.—William Richards was declared the winner of the $400 boat race between him and Jake Teemer at McKeever's, Pa., Sept. 25. It is alleged that the race was fixed for Teemer, and that Richards gave those interested in the job the double cross.

THE HENRY GRAY.—Troublesome, Daisy and De fiance, of the Columbia Yacht Club, on Oct. 2, contended for a cup, over a course on the Hudson River. The Gray won, De fiance second, Daisy third and Troublesome last.

PULLMAN DEFEATS FARRAGUT.—Four-oared crews from the Pullman and Farragut Boat Clubs rowed a mile and three-quarters with turn, for four gold medals, on Calumet Lake, Pullman, Ill., Sept. 25. The Pullmans—Wm. Reynolds (bow), James Jennings, Wm. Murphy, Harry Madden (stroke)—won in 1m. 13s. The Farraguts—W. F. Fowler (bow), G. B. Jenkinson, H. C. Avery, C. G. Plummer (stroke)—steered badly on the way down, and but for that the race would have been much closer, though it is probable the Pullmans would have won, as they led all the way to the turn.

PULLMAN DEFEATS FARRAGUT.—Four-oared crews from the Pullman and Farragut Boat Clubs rowed a mile and three-quarters with turn, for four gold medals, on Calumet Lake, Pullman, Ill., Sept. 25. The Pullmans—Wm. Reynolds (bow), James Jennings, Wm. Murphy, Harry Madden (stroke)—won in 1m. 13s. The Farraguts—W. F. Fowler (bow), G. B. Jenkinson, H. C. Avery, C. G. Plummer (stroke)—steered badly on the way down, and but for that the race would have been much closer, though it is probable the Pullmans would have won, as they led all the way to the turn.

VICTORY FOR THE VALENCIAS.

The four-oared barge-race for four gold medals and a silk pennant, offered by Nat Hicks of 73 Hudson street, Hoboken, took place on the Hudson River on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 2. The weather was bright and cool, and although the wind was high, the course of Fort Lee, being protected by the high bluffs, was in good condition for rowing. The barge which left the foot of Fourteenth street, Hoboken, shortly after two o'clock, carried a goodly number of passengers to the scene, and they found that the promoter had made ample provision for their comfort and enjoyment which was well, as nearly three hours had elapsed before the race was started. The distance rowed was two miles straightaway, from a point above Fort Lee to a pier at Pleasant Valley, and the result was as follows: Valencia B. C., Hoboken, O. Fuchs (bow), James Miller, E. Fuchs, E. Schulze Jr. (stroke), Charles Schneider (coxswain), first, in 14m. Active B. C., Hoboken, G. H. Mohiman (bow), C. J. Saenger, H. Ladehoff, G. H. Mohiman (stroke), John B. Pleant, Wm. John, A. Denehy (stroke), John H. Higgins, Wm. H. Hinckley, G. C. Dempsey (stroke), George Hinnings (coxswain), third, by the same distance; Atlantic B. C., Hoboken, H. C. Kudlich (bow), H. Sagendorff, H. Feirbrand, J. D. Miller (stroke), H. Weinshagen (coxswain), fourth, two lengths behind.

The race between Hoerner and McKay on the other three miles, with a turn, for $500 a side, is to take place on Lake Quinsigamond, Mass., Oct. 19, between 3 and 5 p.m. Smooth water is stipulated for.

RITZ VS. DEMPEXY.—A match race, three miles, with a turn, for $250 a side, between P. A. Dempsey of Philadelphia and John Ritz of Bellairre, O., is to be decided on the Shawmont course, at Philadelphia, on either Oct. 9 or some time during next week.

A SCULLERS' RACE.—At the annual picnic of the Boston Gaslight Company's employees, Oct. 2, was won by John Magee, with Luke Shea second and Jerry Murphy third. Magee took 18m. to row a mile and a half.

BOWING FOR A CUP.—The single-skull champion ship of the Nyack (N. Y.) Rowing Association was rowed for Sept. 30 by Benjamin A. Journeay and J. O. Davidson. The distance was two miles, with turn, and a good race was won by Davidson, finishing two lengths ahead.

J. HAGERTY AND J. J. COLLIER.—J. H. Hagerty and J. J. Collier each attempted, at Blount's, Eng., Sept. 23, to beat the 100yd. record made in the form at the same bath (twenty yards long), in 1m. 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ s. Hagerty was a dozen pounds over his racing weight, yet he swam the distance in 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ s.; Collier, 1m. 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ s.

THE RACE BETWEEN HOMMER AND MCKEEAN.—The race between Hommer and McKeean on one side, and O'Connor and Enright on the other, three miles, with a turn, for $500 a side, is to take place on Lake Quinsigamond, Mass., Oct. 19, between 3 and 5 p.m. Smooth water is stipulated for.

CUMMING'S VICTORY OVER GEORGE.

A London contemporary thus describes the second race of the series between William Cummings and W. G. George, the result of which, as cabled, has already been published: "The toss for choice of station was won by George's representative, and he elected to take the inside. Two attempts with the pistol having failed, the word 'Go!' was given, and away the pair bounded from the mark as level as if shot from a catapult. Cummings ran alongside George for a few yards, then he dropped behind, evidently being intent on making a waiting race of it. Still, the pace in the first lap was very slow, and in the second it was even slower. In this order the first mile was finished in 5m. 18s., and the second in 10m. 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ s. So far neither had made the slightest effort, but George did not let him go, and with his second attempt his action appearing labored. After covering two miles and a quarter Cummings had a feather, but George responded to the spur and drew away again. Three times in the lap Cummings tried his man with the same result, but in the third quarter of the third mile George traveled at his own pace. Thus far things had been unusually tame, and the crowd evidently did not know what to make of it. The pace quickened, finishing the third mile, Cummings here drawing up level, evidently thinking it was time he did something. The Scotchman now forced conclusions, and to the great consternation of George's backers, it was seen that the ex-amateur began to get his arms up, a sure sign to those who have seen him run rapidly that he is not drawn out. For some 200 yards the two men were side by side at sprinting speed, amid ringing cheers. Cummings drew to the front. At 3 $\frac{1}{2}$  miles the Scotchman led by about three yards, and maintaining the sprint, he drew rapidly away, until about half-way through the second lap he was about ten yards in front, when George dropped his hands and stopped. Another roar followed, and Cummings evidently knew what this meant, but he turned his head just to look where his opponent was, and finding that he had pulled up, countered the remainder of the distance at his leisure, the time for the full distance being 20m. 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ s."

PULLMAN ATHLETIC CLUB.—The P. A. C. held their fifth annual Fall games at Pullman, Ill., Sept. 25. The day opened fine, but about noon darkened and by 2:30, the house set for commencing the sports, rain was falling lightly, continuing more or less the entire afternoon. The entries were not as numerous as last Spring, but the meeting was quite successful from a sporting view. Financially it was a failure, in doubt on account of the rainy weather. The tables in different rooms were independent of the weather, and the tables in the hall were closed.

OBSTACLE-RACE.—A. A. Jordan, N. Y. A. C., first; N. Stewart, N. Y. A. C., second.

FIELD OFFICERS.—Referee, Wm. B. Curtis; judges—J. B. Stead, W. C. Morse and Wm. Wood; timers—W. H. Robertson, G. A. Avery and C. A. Reed.

THE WESTCHESTER CUP.

The match between the New York Lacrosse Club and the Independents of Boston, for the championship of the United States and the Westchester Cup, was played at St. George, Staten Island, on Oct. 2. It was witnessed by but few persons, and those few were rendered very uncomfortable by the sharp northwest wind. The result of the contest, limited to one hour and a half, was a victory for the Independents by a score of four goals to two, the visitors taking the first goal in 1m., the second in 9m., third, in 4m., and the fourth in 4m. 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ s. The Scotchman now forced conclusions, and to the great consternation of George's backers, it was seen that the ex-amateur began to get his arms up, a sure sign to those who have seen him run rapidly that he is not drawn out. Two attempts with the pistol having failed, the word 'Go!' was given, and away the pair bounded from the mark as level as if shot from a catapult. Things were unusually lively for a while, but a compromise was agreed upon and the play was given at the same price. Mr. Curtis had a couple of dates at Carlis' last week which he, for some unexplained reason, canceled four concerts at Carlis' this season instead of meeting with favor among the subscribers. One of Mr. Stevens' dogs, a fine bull terrier imported from Liverpool, gave him quite a scare last week. While training him for one of the parts in the play, the dog managed to get loose and ran away. Shaken up and back just in time, and the vicious brute was seized before he was able to do any serious damage. Dr. Kahn now handles the pasteboards at the Grand. Manager Bunnell has several important schemes in hand, which will disclose presently.

At the end of the performance the entire company, by special request, adjourned to McElroy's Hotel, where a sumptuous repast awaited them. Our worthy friend, Frank Girard, favored us with some of his fine selections and songs. There were plenty of

THE CHILD WHO HAS NO MOTHER.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.
BY MARION MAY.

So many sad things we meet in life,
And we meet them night and morning—
We see the pale and grim face of strife,
And sorrow and grief without warning.
There's naught so cruel as death can be—
When he takes a friend or brother,
But the saddest thing on earth to me
Is the child who has no mother.

Ah, who know the treasure we hold—
Hug our dear God-given blessing.
To me the precious thing is gold—
The touch of my hand, the kiss of gold—
We chide and blame so many we meet,
And turn from them to another.
Yet we strive to stay the wayward feet
When we find they have no mother.

Ab, many a bright and blooming girl—
Has gone thro' her young life, dreaming,
Careless and blind to the brightest pearl—
The love of her life, the last gleaming.
She wakes to grieve, her best friend dead,
Her life never knows another.
The downward path is easy to tread,
For, alas! she has no mother.

Many a boy just starting in life,
With a firm and manly bearing—
Has fallen low in the world's mad strife—
With a heart full of pain and woe!
The boy lost his chance, he might win yet—
If they would give him another.
But they push him down, and all forget—
That the poor boy has no mother.

Who like a mother can comfort cheer,
Neath a heavy cloud of sorrow?
When grief is darkest, she's ever near,
Praying for us, and now!
And so I, death cruel can be—
When he takes a friend or brother,
But the wildest thing on earth to me
Is the child who has no mother.

ON ORIENTAL STAGES.

A SHOWMAN'S OBSERVATIONS DURING A FIVE YEARS' TOUR OF THE WORLD.

BY EDWARD ANDREW GLOVER.

CHAPTER IV.—THROUGH THE STRaits OF MALACCA. The voyage through Hong Kong, China and Singapore, Straits of Malacca (our next field of operations), usually occupies between seven and ten days. We, however, made the run down in a large four-masted steamer in seven days and some odd hours, keeping the coast of Cochinchina in sight the whole way, owing to it being the season of the year that the typhoons were expected, so that, in the event of our being caught in one, we could easily make for shelter in one of the numerous rivers or ports with which the coast of China abounds. However, land and sea were propitious, and we were favored with light breezes and calm waters the entire voyage. We were the only European passengers, and, consequently, had the large and roomy staterooms all to ourselves; the saloon being uncomfortably close to the engine room, and the heat intense in the China seas during July, August and September. A dining-table was rigged up on the poop, under a wide-spread awning, enabling the captain, chief-officer, engineer and ourselves—a nice little party of six—to sit down to meals feeling cool and comfortable, and also dispensing with the conventional dressing for dinner—a boon we were thankful for. Besides the vessels crew and ourselves, there were also on board about 300 Chinese passengers, divided up to the various ports in the Straits' settlements. The majority, however, were coolies and hawkers, who had been enjoying a brief holiday in the Celestial Empire, and were returning to Singapore. They occupied the whole of the upper and lower decks, fore and aft of the saloon—the saloon and engine-room being, amidships—and had paid something like $12 each for their passage, food included. Nothing of consequence happened to mar the pleasure of the passage until the morning of the sixth day. While we were seated at the breakfast-table, on the saloon-deck, we heard sounds as of a serious disturbance taking place forward. Before the captain and chief-officer could learn what to do, to cause the three coolies who had been shipped to cook for the Chinese, and the compradores (Chinese chief-steward)—who also acted as interpreter—came rushing onto the saloon-deck beaten and bruised, their clothes in rags and showing other evidences of having been severely handled. They were followed as far as the foot of the ladder by a yelling, gesticulating crowd of angry Chinamen.

It appeared that the Chinese passengers were dissatisfied with the food furnished them, the fish being of an inferior quality, with an insufficient quantity of rice and curvy powder. The captain explained to them, through the interpreter, that it was out of his power to remedy the grievance, and informed them that the provisions had been placed on board the vessel the day before it left the ship for the trip, the compradores and cooks having received instructions from them as to the proper amount of provisions they should serve out to each passenger. He further expressed a hope that they would remain quiet and peaceable, and refrain from creating any further disturbance, so as not to compel him and his officers to take more stringent measures to enforce order. That, however, failed to pacify them, and they continued to mutter threats against the compradores and cooks, who then appealed to the captain for protection. Capt. Joy, seeing that matters were taking a serious turn, had the ladders leading from the main deck onto the poop pulled up, and at the same time the engineers affixed a fire hose to the boiler. The coolies, who had been sent ashore to get fresh water, meant to drive them below by giving them a dose of steam. Whether or not they guessed his intention, I cannot say, but it was the means of suppressing the trouble the Chinese evidently concluding that "discretion was the better part of valor," and at 10 o'clock all was as quiet and orderly as the first day out. With this exception, nothing of any consequence happened to affect the regular daily routine of a voyage at sea.

We arrived at Singapore about 2 P.M., and, after waiting in the roads some time for a pilot, entered the harbor and steamed direct to the wharf, where we disembarked. We soon had our paraphernalia packed on a "bullock backery" wagon, and, giving instructions where they were to be taken, to we hired a gharry (four-wheeled closed conveyance), and started off for that popular and comfortable family hotel, Emerson's. We were soon enjoying a smoke and a yarn with the ever-popular "Colonel," a great friend and patron of professional performers who play Singapore a visit, and a really first-class amateur actor and vocalist, the genial boniface of Emerson's Hotel on the esplanade, and Emerson's Fifteen rooms on the creek.

Singapore is a very lively seaport and prosperous town, abounding in handsome public buildings, broad, well-built, well-kept streets, promenades, parks, gardens and drives. The botanical gardens, under the supervision of an experienced horticulturalist, contain many rare and rare plants.

The far East. There is always a great number of vessels at the wharves and in the roadstead, Singapore being the key to Siam, China, Japan, Borneo, Java, etc., and the B. I. S. N. Co.—British India Steam Navigation Co.—steamers of the Queensland Royal Mail Service call there once a month from London, Eng., to Australia, and vice versa.

Managers of touring companies, after a season in Singapore, have the choice of four distinct routes: First, to Australia, stopping en route at Java, where performances can be given at Samarang, Sourabaya and Batavia, and then proceeding to Queensland, Australia, calling at Cooktown, Townsville, Rockhampton and Brisbane, per B. I. S. N. Co. Second, to India, stopping at Madras, Ceylon, and the capital of Bengal, Calcutta, India, per B. I. S. N. Co. Third, another route to Calcutta, calling at Colombo, and running up to Kandy, Ceylon, and then to Madras and Calcutta, per B. I. S. N. Co. Fourth, to China, Japan and America, calling at Bangkok, Siam.

In Singapore, four shows were given in the town hall, which were well attended and profitable, but as the hall was let on lease for three nights in each week during the month to the manager of a Parsee opera (?) company, we had to make terms with him, also stipulating that the seat (?) was not to be moved or in any way interfered with, but at the same time he was offered the use of it. If any of my brother performers, unacquainted with the working of show-business in the far East, could have been present and witnessed for the first time any one of our shows in Singapore, he would have roared with laughter at the scenery we were compelled to use. For a drawing-room we had a very gorgeous interior of an Oriental museum in all its splendor, redolent of every colored paint that ever emanated from the brush of an artist (?). For a "set cottage" we used what was painted on canvas to represent the massive wood and iron gates of an ancient Oriental fortress. And for a wood or landscape we used what was supposed to represent an Indian jungle; and it was "jungle" in every sense of the word. The artist had "jungle" in his head, and the audience was equally as sensible, and had painted directly in the centre of the canvas an immense tiger in deadly combat with a cobra, the tiger being as large as a decent-sized elephant, and the cobra as thick around as a man's body. I asked the manager if he did not think the tiger and cobra were somewhat large. In very good English he replied as follows: "Sir, they appear to grow much smaller if seen from a good distance off." With that explanation he "salaamed" and retired, evidently satisfied with the "hit" his reply had made.

While in Singapore, we also gave two shows at Fort Canning, a fort, lighthouse and signal-station overlooking Singapore and garrisoned by a battery of artillery and a company of British infantry, the balance of the infantry regiment having headquarters at Langley about four miles from Singapore. In the fort they have converted one of the large rooms into a theatre, with ample stage room and sufficient scenery for ordinary purposes. The lamps, chairs and benches are supplied from the mess and barrack rooms, and the rental charged is just sufficient to cover the cost of lighting the building. From the fort one gets a splendid view of the harbor, with its numerous shipping, the town and bazaar beneath, and the green-clad hills of the surrounding country, the "tip" up the hill being amply repaid on reaching the top by the cool and invigorating atmosphere, and the magnificence of the panoramic view. There are two daily papers in Singapore, and numerous well-conducted and comfortable hotels, D'Europe and Emerson's being on the Esplanade overlooking the bay, and the Adelphi and Waterloo farther up town.

The next halting-place—and the last in the Straits of Malacca—is Penang. Penang boasts of the finest Town Hall in the far East, and it is no idle boast, for it was, without exception, the largest and handsomest building we saw in that quarter of the globe. We stayed in Penang only sixteen hours—giving the performance on the evening of arrival—as we were dependent on reaching the top of the hill being amply repaid on reaching the top by the cool and invigorating atmosphere, and the magnificence of the panoramic view. There are two daily papers in Singapore, and numerous well-conducted and comfortable hotels, D'Europe and Emerson's being on the Esplanade overlooking the bay, and the Adelphi and Waterloo farther up town.

The writer in The Philadelphia Times has got himself into trouble. He has dabbled in the early days of the theatres in America, and, instead of giving credit to "Ireland's Records of the New York Stage," which is manifestly his sole source of information, he pretends to have secured his information from The New York Postboy, whereas he prints nothing from that old paper which Joseph N. Ireland and others had not reprinted and honestly given credit for. The writer in The Times assumes that Thomas Kean, of whom we ask whether he was a professional or an amateur, was the first actor who played Richard III and Captain Macheath in America. There is no evidence that such was the case. On the contrary, there is evidence that plays were performed in the American colonies—Virginia, for example—at least thirteen years before the advent of Kean & Murray Co. There is no doubt at all that an English professional company performed "in America" in 1745-6. There is no doubt that at least an English professional comedian performed "in America" long before 1745. There is no doubt, either, that it was at least proposed to give theatrical performances in New England as early as 1686; and, in view of the sentiment of the communities there, as expressed in proscriptive laws, there is at least some little reason to believe that they were given and were subsequently stopped by legislative action. The history of the drama in America has always been heavily and darkly muddled. It does not make things clearer for late-day writers—who, because ready to hand they find in a book the alleged first easily-attainable record of a play, conclude that that play was never before performed—to reprint, professedly as their own discoveries, the data that have been handed down by Dunlap, Dr. Francis and others who were more nearly contemporaneous than our green hands of to-day with the times to which the chronicles belong.

In PARIS, France, it seems to be handy for a dancer at one theatre to have a husband employed in another. The gas-man at the Eden Theatre is now undergoing four months' imprisonment for theft from the dressing-rooms of the ballet. He had taken only corsets, fleshings and some other articles worn by female dancers in accordance with the regulations of well-conducted theatres that have an eye ahead for possible accidents to their shapely employees. This gas-man gave these duds to his wife.

JOSEPH JEFFERSON is at work dictating his stage experiences to an amanuensis, with a view to their publication at some remote period. He is in no hurry, and therefore his book will be all the better when at last it comes from the press. Should he take a notion to dwell long upon his engagements in the stock of the Baltimore and Philadelphia theatres of about thirty-five years ago, as well as upon his experience as stage-manager of the Chatham Theatre, this city, when Charley Burke, Frank Chanfrau, the Chapman's of both sexes and himself were running character and low comedy high-handed, his chapters will be highly entertaining to the old-timers who are still with us.

A PITTSBURG DRUMMER named Murdoch insulted the McNish, Johnson & Slavin Minstrels at the Weddell House, Cleveland, O., not long ago. Bob Slavin protested, and Murdoch was spry enough to get in a right-angler on the quiet and small Bob's chin. It sent Bob to the floor, but his avenger was at hand in the person of Frank McNish, who dallied with Murdoch's face until a doctor was called in.

A COMEDY just completed by Bronson Howard illustrates the humorous features of a young wife's attempt at housekeeping. Probably Mr. Howard has not seen C. H. Hoyt's "Tin Soldier."

A SHORT TIME AGO one of our correspondents expressed to us surprise that THE CLIPPER's credentials had in his case failed to be honored by the manager of the J. A. McCaul's opera company. As our representative, he had never before failed of courteous recognition. He had been told at the theatre that Mr. McCaul's company did not recognize THE CLIPPER. This was news to us. It turned out to be news also to Mr. McCaul's manager here in town, and likewise to Mr. McCaul himself. Thereupon by mail I interviewed the director of the particular company in question. He was in management five years, and during that time he had never omitted a courtesy to THE CLIPPER. His telegram explains fully:

CHICAGO, Sept. 29, 1886.

EDITOR NEW YORK CLIPPER: The failure to recognize your representative is an unfortunate error, the result of not being specific in giving instructions to the person to be taken to, we hired a gharry (four-wheeled closed conveyance), and started off for that popular and comfortable family hotel, Emerson's. We were soon enjoying a smoke and a yarn with the ever-popular "Colonel," a great friend and patron of professional performers who play Singapore a visit, and a really first-class amateur actor and vocalist, the genial boniface of Emerson's Hotel on the esplanade, and Emerson's Fifteen rooms on the creek.

Singapore is a very lively seaport and prosperous town, abounding in handsome public buildings, broad, well-built, well-kept streets, promenades, parks, gardens and drives. The botanical gardens, under the supervision of an experienced horticulturalist, contain many rare and rare plants.

The far East. There is always a great number of vessels at the wharves and in the roadstead, Singapore being the key to Siam, China, Japan, Borneo, Java, etc., and the B. I. S. N. Co.—British India Steam Navigation Co.—steamers of the Queensland Royal Mail Service call there once a month from London, Eng., to Australia, and vice versa.

Managers of touring companies, after a season in Singapore, have the choice of four distinct routes: First, to Australia, stopping en route at Java, where performances can be given at Samarang, Sourabaya and Batavia, and then proceeding to Queensland, Australia, calling at Cooktown, Townsville, Rockhampton and Brisbane, per B. I. S. N. Co. Second, to India, stopping at Madras, Ceylon, and the capital of Bengal, Calcutta, India, per B. I. S. N. Co. Third, another route to Calcutta, calling at Colombo, and running up to Kandy, Ceylon, and then to Madras and Calcutta, per B. I. S. N. Co. Fourth, to China, Japan and America, calling at Bangkok, Siam.

In Singapore, four shows were given in the town hall, which were well attended and profitable, but as the hall was let on lease for three that he is in a measure responsible for "working up" the unclean side of the affair. It is due to him, as a professional and a manager, to say that he denies this with spirit. He says he would not stoop to such a course, and he points to his record—which is a worthy one—to support him in his defense.

PLAYS continue to have a harrowing effect. A few weeks ago these columns related how Agnes Wallace-Villa had stirred the depths of a humane Judge, and shaped his decision of a knotty case. A Warsaw, Ind., correspondent now paints for us a sort of companion picture: "Last night Miss Maud Card, daughter of a once influential hardware merchant here who was sent to the penitentiary for forgery, was seized with hysterics during the fourth act of 'The Galley.' She had just returned from a visit to her father in the penitentiary, and the prison-scene of the play completely unnerved her. The poor girl's moans were heart-rending. Many of the ladies in the auditorium shared deeply in her distress. The curtain was rung down, and Miss Card was carried from the theatre. To-day the sympathy of Warsaw people is so strongly in favor of the unfortunate merchant that a petition for his pardon is in course of circulation."

THOSE parties, male and female, who are just now talking loudly in behalf of the morality of the stage should be more circumspect in their citations. Immorality is bad, but immorality and hypocrisy are twice as bad. Satan rebuking sin invites retaliation.

A WRITER in The Philadelphia Times has got himself into trouble. He has dabbled in the early days of the theatres in America, and, instead of giving credit to "Ireland's Records of the New York Stage," which is manifestly his sole source of information, he pretends to have secured his information from The New York Postboy, whereas he prints nothing from that old paper which Joseph N. Ireland and others had not reprinted and honestly given credit for.

The writer in The Times assumes that Thomas Kean, of whom we ask whether he was a professional or an amateur, was the first actor who played Richard III and Captain Macheath in America. There is no evidence that such was the case. On the contrary, there is evidence that plays were performed in the American colonies—Virginia, for example—at least thirteen years before the advent of Kean & Murray Co.

There is no doubt at all that an English professional company performed "in America" in 1745-6.

There is no doubt that at least an English professional comedian performed "in America" long before 1745.

There is no doubt, either, that it was at least proposed to give theatrical performances in New England as early as 1686; and, in view of the sentiment of the communities there, as expressed in proscriptive laws, there is at least some little reason to believe that they were given and were subsequently stopped by legislative action.

The history of the drama in America has always been heavily and darkly muddled. It does not make things clearer for late-day writers—who, because ready to hand they find in a book the alleged first easily-attainable record of a play, conclude that that play was never before performed—to reprint, professedly as their own discoveries, the data that have been handed down by Dunlap, Dr. Francis and others who were more nearly contemporaneous than our green hands of to-day with the times to which the chronicles belong.

IN PARIS, France, it seems to be handy for a dancer at one theatre to have a husband employed in another. The gas-man at the Eden Theatre is now undergoing four months' imprisonment for theft from the dressing-rooms of the ballet. He had taken only corsets, fleshings and some other articles worn by female dancers in accordance with the regulations of well-conducted theatres that have an eye ahead for possible accidents to their shapely employees. This gas-man gave these duds to his wife.

JOSEPH JEFFERSON is at work dictating his stage experiences to an amanuensis, with a view to their publication at some remote period. He is in no hurry, and therefore his book will be all the better when at last it comes from the press. Should he take a notion to dwell long upon his engagements in the stock of the Baltimore and Philadelphia theatres of about thirty-five years ago, as well as upon his experience as stage-manager of the Chatham Theatre, this city, when Charley Burke, Frank Chanfrau, the Chapman's of both sexes and himself were running character and low comedy high-handed, his chapters will be highly entertaining to the old-timers who are still with us.

A PITTSBURG DRUMMER named Murdoch insulted the McNish, Johnson & Slavin Minstrels at the Weddell House, Cleveland, O., not long ago. Bob Slavin protested, and Murdoch was spry enough to get in a right-angler on the quiet and small Bob's chin. It sent Bob to the floor, but his avenger was at hand in the person of Frank McNish, who dallied with Murdoch's face until a doctor was called in.

A COMEDY just completed by Bronson Howard illustrates the humorous features of a young wife's attempt at housekeeping. Probably Mr. Howard has not seen C. H. Hoyt's "Tin Soldier."

A SHORT TIME AGO one of our correspondents expressed to us surprise that THE CLIPPER's credentials had in his case failed to be honored by the manager of the J. A. McCaul's opera company.

As our representative, he had never before failed of courteous recognition. He had been told at the theatre that Mr. McCaul's company did not recognize THE CLIPPER. This was news to us.

IT turned out to be news also to Mr. McCaul's manager here in town, and likewise to Mr. McCaul himself.

Thereupon by mail I interviewed the director of the particular company in question.

He was in management five years, and during that time he had never omitted a courtesy to THE CLIPPER.

His telegram explains fully:

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No Reply by Mail or Telegraph.

LETTERS THAT DO NOT REACH US UNTIL MONDAY NOON WILL NOT BE ANSWERED UNTIL THE FOLLOWING WEEK.

AMUSEMENT ANSWERS.

ADDRESSES OR WHEREABOUTS NOT GIVEN. THOSE IN QUEST OF SUCH SHOULD WRITE THE PARTIES IN CARE OF THE CLIPPER POST OFFICE.

AMATEUR ATHLETE. New Orleans.—We do not propose to decide it, as we have done recently, that man is not created of the performer; but if he is required to land upright, which is necessary to make two complete revolutions, it is a very hard thing to do without the aid of a spring-board. We do not say that it cannot be done cleanly by the aid of a long running jump; but we have never seen it done. Although of course—as we have heard—of almost everything in the circus line being done—we have read of it, although without having much faith in what we have read.

H. T. G., Greenboro.—There is no one with that recognized title, no formal competition ever having been instituted. All riders possessing excellence in that line are billed with that title. Owing to differences in styles, several can properly claim pre-eminence. Where styles are substantially alike, it is of course a matter of individual taste or opinion which is the better, and in this column we avoid expressing opinions.

J. M. B., Englewood.—1. There is no such book, for the reason that performers would be foolish to expose the secrets of their business. 2. We have no space to spare to describe the manner of making tableaux appear and fade.

G. McB.—The question your club is arguing about is a fearful "chestnut." That building is on Broadway. It has never been anywhere else, although another building on the same site has been on Sixth Avenue.

ARTHUR JAMES MACKLEY.—The mother of this performer wishes to hear from him. She has heard of the earthquake, and is alarmed. Her address is No. 8 Raby Cottages, Bumby Street, Nottingham, Eng.

M. H. M., Utica.—We cannot aid you. That company were advertising for professionals of experience. As you have had none, you will have to bring personal influence to bear upon some manager to secure an opening.

CONSTANT READER.—We have no time even to "think up" such a matter. Call upon some play-publisher, consult him, make a few purchases, and select the two characters to suit yourself.

N. C., Lockport.—I. Dan Rice has traveled with a circus within that period, and is liable to travel with an other, so far as when the bark is in season. 2. He is about sixty-four years old.

J. M. W., Waterbury.—You must excuse us. We cannot undertake to pass judgment upon the business reliability or standing of professionals.

J. H.—We do not know where. We should judge that he was born either in Ireland or in England, and of Irish parents.

H. D. C., Philadelphia.—The original Big Four—Smith, Waldron, Lester and Allen—played as a team in variety theatres.

Mme. E. B., St. Louis.—Observe in structures at head of this column.

P. C. M., Allentown.—We have not heard of him in some weeks, when he was out with his pavilion show.

D. H. G., Pittsburgh.—F. B. Wilson was formerly of the song-and-dance team of Mackin and Wilson.

F. J. B., Valencia.—Be good enough to inquire at the Opera-house.

A. B. N., Attributed.—Of the Librarian of Congress, Washington, D. C., and for one dollar.

W. B. S.—You should advertise your wants in our business columns, the same as other musicians do.

H. P. K., Myerstown.—See reply to "J. M. W., Waterville."

B. B. B., Brooklyn.—It would cost eighty cents for one insertion.

D. H. North Adams.—Mary Anderson was born in Sacramento, Cal.

OLD READER, St. Louis.—We do not know. See head of this column.

T. N. K., Cleveland.—Send the letter as proposed.

J. F. S., Stockbridge.—There are no such companies.

R. F. D., Indianapolis.—Arrived Monday morning.

S. M., Brooklyn.—We obligingly "give it up."

D. E. A., Chicago.—See head of this column.

CARDS.

F. W.—We take no cognizance of double pinhole, in melting which practice varies greatly. It is difficult with the regular game, which is single deck pinhole.

C. A. M., Brooklyn.—That is not poker. It is a special way of playing in defiance of true poker principles. You have to agree to play that way. Now agree as to how all the disputes likely to arise from so playing are to be decided. 2. Sometimes it would be a misdeal after the draw, and it cannot be a misdeal at any time if the holder of six cards has looked at or raised his cards before making known that he has too many.

C. N. C.—1. You are entitled to the pot, no matter what you called your own hand. 2. You get the card at once.

A. B. C., Peoria.—The dealer can at poker draw any number of cards upon one.

A. M. M., Bradford.—The cutter of jack wins.

W. D. S., Omaha.—Certainly he can, because at stake stakes a man is debared from betting more than his opponent shows or declares for that particular deal. Furthermore, no player has any right to so arrange his capital that all hands cannot readily count it.

F. M., Detroit.—1. The highest euchre-card, if high is that is Jack. 2. See Dice, Dominoes, etc.

G. B.—Its value must be agreed upon at the same time that it is agreed to play it. The bet is off.

BASEBALL, CRICKET, ETC.

J. F. W., Boston.—If you and the other better have left it to our decision, A loses.

MASON CITY.—A wins the stakes. Such bets are held to mean two to one or better.

CONSTANT READER, Detroit.—It required the consent of both men to have the wager stand upon the result of any game played on a day different from that wagered upon. Smith's notification to the stakeholder that he would let his money go on the next day's play was simply an expression of his willingness. It did not bind him who had gone out of town, and the referee had no right to pay Smith the money. The bet was off on Sept. 21.

H. T. E., Bradford.—It was obviously a typographical error. The batsman who forced at second base the third man out is of course credited with being left on first-base.

C. C., Philadelphia.—1. The National League championship is awarded to the club winning the greatest percentage of games. 2. The official scorer of each club is generally appointed at the commencement of the season, and is required to score in home-games only.

J. R. M., Abilene.—1. It means the act of fielding, and not pitching. 2. $4.200 is said to have been the largest salary every paid to a professional for one season.

D. F. G., Boston.—The party offering the bet, loses.

READER, Jacksonville.—A wins the bet.

Two SURNERS, Champaign.—One hundred and sixty-eight, if every one of the League clubs plays six times with every other.

P. B. S. T., Boston.—1. A wins. The Washingtons won the game, the Indians in which St. Louis disinterestedly themselves. 2. As in this case, also, the bet was "win or tie"; it is clear that the final score being 0 to 0, which is a tie, A again wins.

J. M. J., Bakersfield.—1. A base runner can run on a foul-fly, and is not obliged to hold the bag until the ball is in the pitcher's hands. 2. The base runner is obliged to return and touch the base after the ball has settled in the hands of the fielder. 3. It is not a balk when the pitcher makes a feint of throwing the ball to first-base and then delivers the ball to the bat.

AQUATIC.

H. H., Baltimore.—The wager cannot be decided. In my opinion, the winner was the faster. Ours is the 40-mile way, but if we believe that she ever made twenty-six miles an hour, even with wind and tide in her favor, then—well, we don't.

J. N., Boston.—In the match race between Fred Plaisted and Patsy Reagan, May 27, 1875, Plaisted led for three-quarters of a mile, but Reagan was about two lengths ahead when Fred fell out of his boat.

ATHLETIC.

Horseman of the Age.

AN ABSOLUTE AND PERMANENT SUCCESS.

Created and Sustained by an Exhibition of Genuine Merit and Marvelous Sagacity that has not been equalled in the Past or Present Age.

Prof. D. M. Bristol's EQUESCURRICULUM

Reason Gifted, HORSES, PONIES, MULES. Twenty-two Mind Endowed, in Number.

Being the largest school of Educated horses ever organized, and the only one now giving exhibitions in this country. Appearing only in the principal theatres and cities. Time being filled for the season, this advertisement is not inserted in THE CLIPPER solely with a view of increasing our already enormous receipts, but for obvious reasons—chief among them, to acquaint managers and the community generally that we have "got there, Elias," and to-day have the very best, most successful money-making amusement enterprise on this Continent. A bold assertion to make in these days of unusual prosperity, but nevertheless strictly true. A fact that will be sustained by Managers, Kingsley of Orange, Incluse of New Brunswick, Baylis of Wilmington, Burch of Burlington, Simmons of Elizabeth, and others where we have recently appeared, the Opera-houses not being large enough to accommodate the vast throngs of people that would assemble to greet these

EQUINE WONDERS.

PROF. D. M. BRISTOL - Proprietor. JNO. C. PATRICK - Manager.
